Introduction

The period 1990-1999 in Africa was significant in the context of peacebuilding and conflict transformation. It was during this period that many countries including those that had previously enjoyed relative peace experienced bouts of civil war and cross border violent conflicts.

Today, with a few exceptions, many of these countries have managed to move from the crisis stage to the post conflict phase. However, even in the absence of large- scale violence, they still experience pockets of violence and face the uphill task of both physical and social reconstruction. Most are still characterized by challenges relating to peace and state-building and most of their conflict drivers remain inadequately addressed. They are also characterized by weak electoral, judicial and economic structures; all of which are important elements in making a country stable. Their levels of fragility however differ from one country to another.

In the recent past, a number of African countries that were in the post conflict phase have rolled back to the conflict phase. This has been witnessed in countries in the Great Lakes, East Africa and the Greater Horn of Africa regions.

This training in Peacebuilding Programming in Conflict & Post Conflict settings in Africa aims at equipping participants with the necessary knowledge and skills that can enable them ably engage in peacebuilding programming that is relevant for these kinds of contexts.

In the past, participants to this training have been drawn from grassroot, national, regional and international agencies operating in Burundi, Central Africa Republic, Democratic Republic of Congo, Ethiopia, Ghana, Kenya, Mali, Mozambique, Nigeria, Rwanda, Somalia, South Sudan, Sudan, Tanzania and Zimbabwe.

What participants will get from the training

1. An enhanced understanding of different conflict and post-conflict settings in Africa
2. Practical knowledge of conflict analysis tools relevant for conflict and post conflict contexts.
3. Increased understanding of peacebuilding programming options for conflict and post conflict settings
4. An increased understanding of breaking cycles of violence in post conflict settings using healing centred peacebuilding approaches
5. An increased understanding of Conflict sensitive peacebuilding programming
6. An understanding of gender in post conflict and conflict settings using the different tools for gender analysis and mainstreaming in these contexts

Content Overview

1. Exploring our conflict and post conflict settings in Africa

In this session, participants will explore various conflict and post conflict countries that will be represented in the training with the aim of having a better understanding of:

- The key issues in the different sectors (social, economic, political and security)
- Existing peacebuilding opportunities

2. Conflict Analysis Tools

This session will introduce participants to different tools of analysis that are relevant in understanding their operating contexts and in informing their peacebuilding programming.

3. Peacebuilding Programming for conflict & post conflict settings

This session aims at introducing participants to some key programming options that are relevant for conflict and post conflict settings drawing from different frameworks developed for the continent

4. Breaking cycles of violence; Collective trauma and healing

Violence is widespread in conflict and post-conflict settings at individual, community and structural levels. This session will explore how violence at different levels is inter-linked and the healing strategies available at each level and how this can be infused into peacebuilding programming.

5. Understanding Conflict sensitivity in peacebuilding programming

This session is aimed at enabling participants appreciate the importance of being conflict sensitive in peacebuilding programming so that their interventions do not exacerbate the conflict or post conflict context

6. Gender in conflict and post-conflict settings

This session will outline the gender dimensions in conflict and post conflict settings, introduce participants to the principles of gender mainstreaming and to the different tools of gender analysis and mainstreaming

Trainers/Facilitators

This training will be conducted by seasoned peacebuilding practitioners with years of experience designing and conducting peacebuilding trainings and programmes for conflict and post conflict settings in the continent of Africa and beyond.

Training Methodologies

The training will make use of a wide range of participatory adult learning models including inquiry, case study analysis, individual and online group tasks and reflections from participants' and facilitators experiences.
